VINCENT J. COREY	:
a/k/a "John Russio"	:	I N F O R M A T I O N

The defendant having waived in open court prosecution by indictment, the United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey charges:

1. At all times relevant to this Information:

a. ITT Corporation ("ITT"), an Indiana corporation headquartered in White Plains, New York, was an engineering and manufacturing company that, among other things, provided mission critical products and services that supported the United States military and its allies.

b. Among ITT's assets were frequency generators that were used as testers in the manufacturing process of other items to mimic radio frequencies of surface to air missiles.

c. Defendant VINCENT J. COREY a/k/a "John Russio," a resident of West New York, New Jersey, was a staff engineer for ITT who had a Department of Defense security clearance that allowed him access to a secured area of the ITT premises in Clifton, New Jersey with a personal identification number.

d. The secured area contained, among other items, an Agilent PSG CW Signal Generator E8257D O Option 1E1, 1EH, 520, HAR, UNT, UNW, + UNX (hereinafter "Frequency Generator"), which was valued at approximately $50,000.

e. Individual 1 was an employee of Corporation 1, which was a leasing equipment company in Cupertino, California.

2. In or about July 2010, defendant VINCENT J. COREY a/k/a "John Russio," using the fictitious name "John," contacted Corporation 1's eBay account, offering to sell the Frequency Generator for $20,000.

3. Individual 1 negotiated the terms and conditions of the sale of the Frequency Generator with defendant VINCENT J. COREY a/k/a "John Russio," who used the fictitious name "John Russio."

4. On or about Sunday, July 25, 2010, VINCENT J. COREY a/k/a "John Russio" entered the Clifton, New Jersey premises of ITT carrying an empty duffle bag. Defendant VINCENT J. COREY a/k/a "John Russio" thereafter accessed the secured area of the premises of ITT, and left the premises with a duffle bag that appeared to contain an object. The duffle bag was large enough to contain the Frequency Generator.

5. On or about Monday, July 26, 2010, defendant VINCENT J. COREY a/k/a "John Russio," using the fictitious name

"John Russio," shipped, via UPS®, a package with a declared value of $20,000 to Corporation 1.

6. On or about August 5, 2010, defendant VINCENT J. COREY a/k/a "John Russio," using the fictitious name "John Russio," forwarded an invoice for $20,000 for the Frequency Generator to Corporation 1. That same day, Individual 1 sent a "Contract for the Sales [sic] of Personal Property" (hereinafter "Contract") as between "John Russio" as Seller, and Corporation 1 as Buyer, for the sale of the Frequency Generator for a total purchase price of $20,000. Defendant VINCENT J. COREY a/k/a "John Russio" thereafter faxed from his home address in West New York, New Jersey, the Contract to Corporation 1, which was executed under the fictitious name, "John Russio."

7. A telephone call from "John Russio" to Individual 1 on or about August 5, 2010 registered on Corporation 1's telephone caller identification system as "Corey Vincent."

8. On or about July 26, 2010 in the District of New Jersey, and elsewhere, defendant

VINCENT J. COREY
a/k/a "John Russio"

did knowingly transport, transmit, and transfer in interstate commerce goods, wares, and merchandise, of the value of $5,000 or more, knowing the same to have been stolen, converted, and taken by fraud.

In violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section
2314 and Section 2.
